What is happening:

Crews are approaching the end of the excavation phase at the King-Bathurst south station site as they finish shaping the underground space for the future Ontario Line station and tunnels.

Crews will begin installing:

- Permanent waterproofing membranes which will be applied to the station's underground walls to prevent water from seeping in, avoiding leaks and water damage.
- Pouring concrete elements: Crews will start constructing the structure of the station – the first major structural element is the base slab that will form the foundation of the station box.

What to expect:

- Expected on-site construction equipment includes various concrete sprayers, telehandlers, boom lifts, concrete mixers and pumps, troweling machines, grading equipment, asphalt pavers, and other machinery as required.
- Residents and businesses can expect to hear noise from the above listed construction equipment as they are moved into the station sites and begin construction work.
- Working hours are not expected to extend beyond 11:00 P.M. except in unforeseen circumstances requiring immediate action to ensure site safety before departure.
- Crews will arrive on-site prior to the start of work to set up equipment.
- Vehicle traffic will access worksites daily via designated routes from Stewart Street to Portland Street gates for the South site, and from Bathurst Street to Adelaide Street for the North site.
- To minimize impacts on residents and businesses in the area, mitigations include air quality, noise, and vibration monitoring, street cleaning, site hoarding, additional paved areas, sprinkler systems, and mud mats for dust control.
